

Alumni Achievements

I learned of Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning through the school counseling office at Elizabethtown Area High School, from which I graduated in 2005. I continued my education by attending the University of the Sciences: Philadelphia College of Pharmacy to earn my Doctor of Pharmacy degree. I was able to utilize LDHL's interest-free loans for four of the six years of my education. These loans were vital in my ability to attend university and to alleviate some of the stresses of borrowing. I love how they are designed to consistently aid the students of Lancaster County by putting the repaid loans right back into the hands of the next student. My LDHL loans were the first ones I paid off so that another student may receive the benefit of this great program just as I did.

After graduating in 2011, I started working in community pharmacy. I decided that I wanted to work in a more clinical setting, so I began a two-year self-study program to earn my Geriatric Certificate. I became a Board Certified Geriatric Pharmacist and in 2016 began working for Williams Apothecary in Lancaster as a consultant pharmacist. I work at every location, so my days are never the same, always exciting, and I am always learning something new. I also became a board member of the Lancaster County Pharmacist Association and have volunteered with their scholarship committee.

This year, I started volunteering at the Lancaster Farm Sanctuary, where I help with daily chores and spend time with the animals. I have found that this is another area where a medical background can be very beneficial. I started working towards certification in veterinary pharmacy so I may continue to give back to my community. I will always be grateful for the interest-free loan program that Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning provides. I am proud to say that I have been fortunate enough to donate in the past few years. I will continue to donate as this program will help other students of Lancaster County achieve their post-high school education dreams. Thank you LDHL and thank you to all who give to this worthy program.

Dear Friends,

On behalf of the entire board and staff of Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning, I am pleased to report on our accomplishments from this past year. LDHL has always been a dynamic organization with changes in board members and staff and this year was no different. Several people sought out the opportunity to become members of the board of directors, bringing with them financial, legal and operational expertise. Change also meant saying thank you and farewell to long serving board member Kay Brubaker. It was Kay's leadership, dedication and expertise that guided LDHL through the spring before I was honored to be chosen to fulfill the role. Best wishes Kay!

Something that didn't change and has never changed in the nearly 60 years of serving students (looking forward to our diamond anniversary in 2021) is the organization's commitment to the Lancaster community and the education of our neighbors. More than 300 loans were mailed out in August after a rewarding and fun night of stuffing envelopes with checks by the board members and staff. While the loan recipients were Lancaster area residents, their colleges and universities of choice spanned the entire United States with as much diversity in programs as in geography.

To maintain and strengthen our commitment, LDHL approved an entirely new loan program focusing on professional programs in the medical and technology fields, both identified as high demand occupations needed in Pennsylvania in the coming years. Partnering with the Lancaster County Career and Technology Center, LDHL will soon be offering loans for these and other programs which do not require a four-year college degree. This is an exciting new area for LDHL, illustrating the innovative nature of the organization to meet the needs of the community.

Supporting our vision and strategy have been accomplished through personal contact with recipients, new community marketing campaigns and additional technology capabilities. Of course, our existing programs of outreach to local schools is still as strong as ever, particularly via attendance at school financial aid nights and other opportunities to meet with families. If you see us at one of those events, please stop by to tell us how you are and how we can improve our support of the community.

As we enter the 2019-2020 academic year, we recognize and thank you for your continued support of our mission. Your support is the true engine of LDHL as a vehicle for good and we appreciate your partnership with us. Thank you!

Sincerely,
James Lee, Sr.

E. ANN KLEIN TRADE, OCCUPATIONAL, AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION LOAN PROGRAM LAUNCHES

With much anticipation, Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning is proud to announce that the E. Ann Klein Trade, Occupational, and Technical Education Loan Program, also known as TOTE Loan Program, will begin accepting applicants November 1, 2019.

The TOTE Loan Program was made possible by a generous gift made by (Elizabeth) Ann Klein. Mrs. Klein had a lifelong interest in automotive technology and specialized trade occupations. The TOTE Loan Program will launch as a two-year pilot program with the Lancaster County Career and Technology Center (LCCTC).

TOTE Loans will be available to Lancaster County students enrolled full-time in LCCTC Automotive Technology and Practical Nursing programs.

Students are eligible for up to one TOTE Loan and must utilize the funds for LCCTC program tuition. Like the Traditional Interest-free Loan Program, students will begin repayment six months after graduating or leaving school.

They have a daughter and son who are both currently attending college.

Leaving a Legacy

A strong belief in the value of education has been a common thread in the lives of Jim and Alace Humphreville. The couple has supported the LDHL mission since 1982 and recently reached the Legacy Loan level of giving, dedicating the loan in memory of their son Richard A. Humphreville.

Jim and Alace met at Cornell University, while both were studying geology. Prior to attending Cornell University, Jim received his undergraduate degree in geology from Franklin & Marshall College. After graduation, the Humphrevilles returned to Jim's hometown of Lancaster and raised their three children.

Jim's career path lead him to positions at Expro and DuPont, eventually becoming an independent consultant. After focusing on raising the couple's children, Alace returned to school to obtain a Masters in Psychology from Millersville University, leading her to a career at IU12, serving York, Adams and Franklin Counties.

The couple remained in their Hamilton Park home until 2015 when they settled into The Mews at Homestead Village where they continue to remain active in their community. Jim enjoys singing bass with the chorale and Alace is involved in the history roundtable.

When asked about their philosophy of education, Alace remembered her daughter Ann saying that during her college years studying drama and English at Franklin & Marshall College she "learned how to learn." Ann became a student of her work, even after she was the vice president of a private investment firm.

Jim shared that doing the job well and working hard is just as important, if not more, than focusing on the specific degree a student earns.

This strong work ethic was certainly evident in their son Richard (Dick). Jim once received a report from Dick's supervisor at Stauffers of Kissel Hill stating how satisfying it was to hear Dick always ask, "What can I do next?" after successfully completing each task. Dick was also a very dedicated newspaper carrier.

Jim and Alace recently celebrated 64 years of marriage and have been happy to recently welcome their son Charlie back to Lancaster. After earning a degree at DeVry University and following a career in Silicon Valley, he now resides in the same area where he was raised in Lancaster Township.

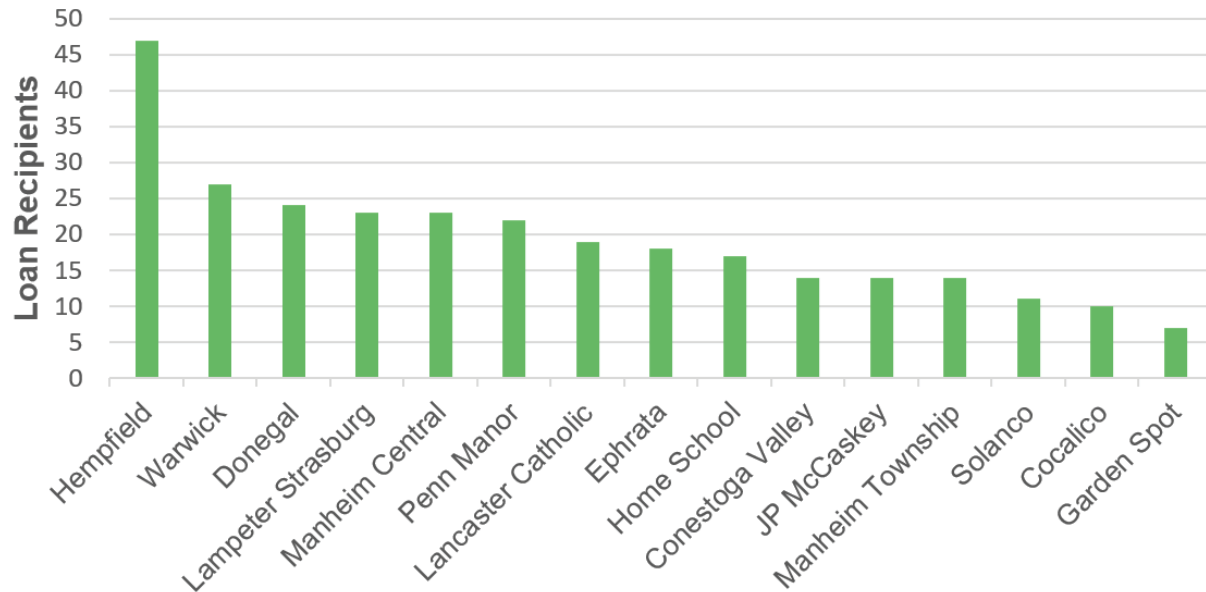

The first recipient of the Richard A. Humphreville Memorial Legacy Loan is Grace Martin. The couple's interest in history will carry on through Grace, who will be studying history at Liberty University. Her goal is to become a curator or historian with the Smithsonian Institution. The Humphreville's high value of education and strong work ethic will continue through the interest-free student loans provided by LDHL.
