

Lancaster Dollars

FOR HIGHER LEARNING
A Nonprofit Since 1961.

REPORT CARD

In my role as the Assistant Principal of Manheim Central High School, I collaborate consistently with a community of school board members, administrators, teachers, staff and parents who share a common goal: to provide unwavering support. We are dedicated to igniting students' passions, guiding them to discover their purposes, and empowering them to emerge from our schools as difference makers.

I wanted to take a moment to express my gratitude for the incredible work of Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning and its donors. LDHL believes not just in the future of our people and communities, but in our children's ability to be pivotal difference makers in our world.

As you review this report card consider what the donors listed have contributed towards: potential, promise, people, and their access to opportunity. LDHL and their donors provided me this same opportunity over a decade ago. Hundreds of recipients of the LDHL interest-free loans, myself included, have been contributing back to their communities because someone simply believed in their potential-- this is an investment that cannot be quantified in dollar signs.

Keisha McCauley

This issue of the Report Card showcases the many people who are integral to achieving the mission of Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning. People often ask “How does it work to be able to give out interest-free loans, year after year?”

As illustrated below, it starts with students bound for higher learning (colleges, universities, trade/technical schools) who apply for interest-free loans. Where do the funds available for annual loans come from? The answer is simple: loan repayments from past loan recipients increased by generous donations from the community and businesses. With loans being distributed once a year, monthly loan repayments can be invested until it is time to send loan checks to schools in August.

While this cycle of applicants, loans, graduates and donors repeats annually, the work of the organization to achieve the mission would not be possible without the work of dedicated staff, Board leaders, community volunteers, generous donors, graduates in repayment and certainly current student loan recipients.

I am deeply indebted to each and every person included in this Report Card – it is you who achieve the mission, who make this organization successful and who make students’ dreams of higher education become realities.

Thank you, thank you one and all,

Jean Bednarski
President, Board of Directors

Achieving Mission Together

Leaving a Legacy

This year we were fortunate to be able to give out a total of 36 Legacy Loans thanks to the addition of three new Legacy Donors. They explain below why supporting LDHL's mission is so important to them.

Legacy Loans, which are given in the same amount as Traditional Loans, are named after an individual, group or organization that has donated at the $10,000 level, either as a onetime donation or over several years. Students can only receive a Legacy Loan one time, and the donor can set small preferences, such as specific major or specific school.

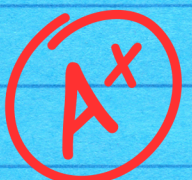

"I'm grateful for what I have been able to achieve, which was only possible through the education that I received. I want others to have the same opportunity. Public service work is undervalued in the marketplace. Any assistance that encourages and allows people to pursue work in that area and have a livable wage and sustainable lifestyle is important. Although the loan amount was never very much but paying for school entirely on my own every little bit helped. After graduation I did volunteer, non-profit and government work so pay was limited. Any break on repayment obligations was helpful." ~Joel Heisey (former loan recipient, dedicated donor)

"Teachers are so important for our country and democracy. Their job has gotten even more difficult in recent years with many leaving the profession. One way I can help is to provide funds to Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning for students majoring in education. While a teacher at Manheim Township School District, I oversaw the teacher's union scholarship fund for many years. My family did not value education and I had to work hard to pay for my education. I am passionate about providing financial support for needy students. Previous Board member Kathy Potier first told me about Dollars for Scholars as it was known then. She was a friend from my Great Books group and a fellow English teacher at MTHS." ~Luci Steele (dedicated donor)

"We know first-hand how expensive college can be. Both of our daughters were lucky to have received a loan from Lancaster Dollars for Higher Learning. That helped ease some of the burden associated with attending a private college and an out-of-state college. Given that the loan did not require payment of any interest and the terms of repayment were favorable to the student, these loans offer distinct advantages over other types of college financing. Helping to further someone's education by creating a Legacy Loan in honor of our daughter, Macy, seemed like a wonderful way to keep her memory alive." ~Gary & Melanie Zimmerman (Parents of loan recipients)

"The loans serviced to me by LDHL were a blessing. I did not have to worry about interest accruing on my account, which is the only loan I had with this situation. I truly believe Lancaster Dollars just wants their students to have a great education affordably without burdening students with additional interest payments: which quickly add up. I would absolutely use LDHL if I had to do it all again!" ~Lacey L. (Lebanon Valley College) The Hershey Company
